(same as REL 233)

Credit Hours: 3 Lec 3

PREREQUISITE: None

COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course is a critical examination of religious claims and phenomena. Topics include, but are not limited to: the nature and existence of God; the epistemology of religious belief; the possibility of miracles, life after death, and mystical experience; as well as the interrelationship between ethics, values, and religion.

1. COURSE GOALS

- 1.1 Articulate the conventions, methods, and reasoning strategies necessary to conduct a philosophical analysis of religious phenomena and truth-claims, drawing attention to the distinctive features of the philosophical perspective in contrast to other scholarly approaches to religion
- 1.2 Showcase the major issues and themes in the philosophy of religion (God's existence, the coherence of theism, the problem of pluralism etc.), and present the major arguments, perspectives, and objections defended by both classical and contemporary thinkers
- 1.3 Draw attention to well-known instances in which differences in perspective over the major issues has resulted in clashes between individuals and groups in the broader culture.
- 1.4 Fine-tune strategies for reading, analyzing, and evaluating complex ideas and issues contained within the philosophical literature
- 1.5 Provide tools and opportunities for critical reflection, discussion, and development of one's own views on the philosophy of religion

2. OUTCOMES

Upon satisfactory completion of this course, students will be able to:

- 2.1 recognize and explain conventional terminology and vocabulary used within the discipline
- 2.2 interpret relevant primary and secondary source texts as well as extract crucial information (e.g., main thesis, premises, assumptions, etc.) central to the claims being made in those texts
- 2.3 analyze and evaluate an argument using the principles of logic and critical reasoning
- 2.4 uphold in dialogue and debate the intellectual virtues and social conditions required for the project of genuine truth-seeking
- 2.5 describe the nature of philosophy as a discipline and philosophy of religion as a branch of that discipline.
- 2.6 explain a range of classical arguments and counterarguments related to the existence of God (e.g., cosmological, teleological, problem of evil, etc.), as well as the major objections that have been defended by classical and contemporary philosophers of religion.
- 2.7 differentiate between the infinite vs. the personal attributes of God as defended by classical theists, as well as analyze various philosophical difficulties that attend to those attributes
- 2.8 compare and contrast various definitions of faith as well as discuss the epistemology of religious belief over and against other ways of knowing (e.g., scientific, introspective, perceptive, etc.)
- 2.9 assess the rational plausibility of the occurrence of certain commonly alleged phenomena, such as miracles, life after death, mystical experience, etc.
- 2.10 construct and defend a position on the existence of God, the relationship between faith and reason, the problem of evil, or the possibility of miracles, employing the conventions and reasoning strategies characteristic of the discipline
